A man's life is the most valuable thing he possesses for his own good and that of his generations, and he is inevitably liable to lose it by death at any unexpected moment of time to him. It is so ordered to be of life for man by his creator. He can take no lease of time. He must die at any moment, and when he is dead that is the end of his power to die, on time.

Peters, of the supreme court of Maine, one of the brightest and wittlest ornaments of the bench in that state or any other. While the judge was still a practicing lawyer he had for a client a farmer named Hauscom, who, though he was well past middle age, had the notion that he was as young as ever, and could hold his own in a mowing field with the best of them. One day the farmer came into the judge's office to look at some papers which had been drawn up for his signature, and as he picked up the first one he began to adjust it in the manner sometimes spoken of by those who use glasses and mislay them as "telescoping." The judge noticed the action, and seeing that the farmer was holding the paper pretty well at arm's length, remarked pleasantly: "Your eyesight seems to be failing a little, Mr. Hanscom. You'll have to get a pair of spectacles."

"Not a bit of it," growled the old farmer, "not a bit of it. My sight's as good as it ever was. I shan't want 'spectacles' for a good many years yet."

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 5.—There has been for a number of days preliminary work going on which will have for its end the forming of a co-operative insurance association to compete with the foreign insurance companies. The necessity of such a company was brought about by the frequent firest caused, as many believe, by over-insurance allowed by the foreign companies. The new association will insure no property for over 50 per cent of its value. The leaders in the matter are prominent, conservative merchants and manufacturers.

Waco has joined hands with Dallas in the matter and other cities in Texas are to be asked to help out the matter. The idea is one that will receive a hearty response here.
